How the property sector responds to the market through these difficult times is crucial for sustainable long term development. The Homes and Communities Agency (HCA) is identifying opportunities available to support the provision of homes and communities, and helping local with delivery partners create prosperous places for the future.

At a seminar on Wednesday 20th May, HCA's Regional Director for the East Midlands, Margaret Allen will introduce the Agency and explain how it is playing a pivotal role in the provision of affordable homes, as well as keeping momentum going on major regeneration projects. It will outline the Agency's key responsibilities and objectives and how these will impact on local businesses. It will also look at the projects which are underway in the East Midlands and demonstrate how local developers can make a real difference in creating sustainable local communities.
