

Careers Event: Working in the Property Sector

5th March 2012, 1.15pm
Bath University, Claverton Down, Bath, BA2 7AY

As part of Women in Property's ongoing roadshow initiative, we are participating in educational events arranged with local schools, colleges and universities with the aim of educating young women about the prospects available to them in the property and construction sector.

Corporate responsibility is on the agenda of most employers and therefore this may be an activity that is actively encouraged by your employer.

Bath University has invited Women in Property to a lunchtime careers talk on the 5th March to present "Working in the Property Sector".

As a Women in Property volunteer you would be asked to participate in a small presentation, be available to answer questions from the students and talk to them generally about your experiences in your chosen area, including your training experiences. Please note that volunteers will not be required to invest preparation time and we have materials prepared for these presentations.

The event structure is intended to be informal and relaxed. We need volunteers to help promote the varied range of property careers and how we have reached our current job positions.

If you would be interested in participating in this event or would like to offer your services for future events, please contact;
Rachel Bell – rachelbell@stridetreglown.com or 0117 9743271.

Many thanks.
