

University of Reading Library – Site Visit Update and Panel Discussion

Thursday 21st February 2019

12:30 pm to 14:30 pm

University of Reading Library, Whiteknights, Reading, RG6 6AE

Women in Property are excited to be able to offer a panel discussion in partnership with the University of Reading, ISG and Constructing Excellence to showcase their new library from members of the project team. This follows on from our previous site visit last year when the project was just over half-way through.

Projects involve a number of people, and on major projects many thousands of people. The structure of the project team tends to change through the duration of the project; some team members might only have a very brief involvement, bringing specialist knowledge or supplying specialist components during a particular phase, whilst others, such as the client, project managers or lead consultants may be involved for many years. Join us for this panel discussion to:

- Understand key roles within the delivery of a project
- Use the Library as a case study; who has been involved and what has been the key challenges they have had to overcome
- See some of the finished areas which have been delivered to the University
- Understanding of how a project is phased and delivered when in a live student environment

This event is being hosted jointly with Constructing Excellence and lunch will kindly be provided by ISG.

To Apply: Please fill out and return the attached form together with your cheque (payable to "Women in Property") to:
