Women in Property

New year, new normal? Two years ago, few of us foresaw the workplace that we now inhabit – virtual meetings, working from home, starting a new job with people not yet met face to face, worrying whether furlough was simply redundancy in waiting. At such times the support of a mentor is particularly important, which is why Women in Property quickly rose to the challenge by adapting its mentoring programme for online delivery and then added a complementary service – the Mentoring Club.

Designed for mentors and mentees, the Mentoring Club is a forum for the experienced and those waiting to embark on a relationship, to share experience, discuss key topics and hear some practical, transferable tips.

At times like these, talking with others who understand your world, but are outside your work and home environment, can be just the support needed to manage challenges and make constructive decisions. The Mentoring Club provides that critical friend environment, led by Sandi Rhys Jones OBE.

Comments from those taking part.

“What a great session.”

“Inspiring, informative and a great opportunity to share experiences and learn from others.”

Places will be confirmed with joining instructions to Zoom

“Sandi’s chairing/moderation of the session is very gentle but authoritative. It feels like a safe place to be open and honest.”

“A genuinely supportive and caring forum, which elicited ideas and contributed to boosting the confidence that I had in my participation in the programme.”

“Would like to join another session, perhaps to learn more about how mentors deal with virtual v face to face, for example.”
